

Florida Receives 2011 STRIMA AFIRM Award

STRIMA's AFIRM (Award for Innovative Risk Management) program was established to recognize a new, innovative, and effective risk management process that a State has implemented within the last three years and that has been in place for at least one year.

Three states submitted proposals for the 2011 AFIRM award - Alabama, Nevada, and Florida. The STRIMA Executive Board selected Florida's "Stop Light Trending Report" as the AFIRM winner. This report compares each agency to the statewide average, as well showing agency performance over a six month period in a unique, user friendly format. Congratulations, Florida!

All submissions are included on the website (see Documents Section) for member review. All three states are to be commended for their worthy efforts. The AFIRM committee will be soliciting 2012 submissions in the next few months – keep your submissions coming!
